After many years, the story is still being told by children (and fans) on social media, and now we got yet another animated film that will be released theatrically. Maurice Sendak's "At World's End" is based on the book "Maurice Sendak's A very Grinful, Lonely and Haughty", which is still the most popular novel of all time; with over 100,000 copies printed in 20 languages on nearly 70 hardcover editions alone, you'll be able to read it as it is today, in any bookstore, library or college library, anytime. And this is only a part of their new Animated film, based on this book. This film contains many interesting facts about the writer and how he wrote the original stories and what he actually made up in order to create the film..
